Record Shows, Sports, Teams, Events and Movies

Never miss an episode or game by recording your favorite programs to your personal library.

Add/Remove programs from DVR library

Add to your library (recordings & on demand):

- Any time you see the add icon
 enext to a show, sports team, event, etc., you can add it to your DVR library.
- Adding a program to your library means that all current and upcoming airings will be recorded-its unlimited so record everything!

Remove a program from your library:

- To remove a program from your library, select the remove icon next to the title on the program page.
- Removing a program from your library means that current and upcoming airings will no longer be recorded. Your recorded programs will be available until they expire.

Find recorded programs

Your recordings can be found in the Library tab. Select any program page to see current & upcoming airings.

Understand your playback options for recordings

If you're recording a game or program, you can choose to:

- Start your program from the beginning
- Resume the program where you paused it
- Watch the currently live program

Recording single episodes, games, or events

 For shows: If you add a show to your library, all airings—including upcoming airings and reruns—will be recorded automatically. You can't record a single episode, but with Google taking care of your recording space, who needs just one episode?

- For sports: Add your preferred teams, leagues, or group of games (e.g., all NBA Playoff games) to your library, and any games available in your area will be recorded across any of the networks they air on. On some occasions, certain sporting events may not be available. Learn more about viewing restrictions on YouTube TV.
- For one-off events, like awards shows: Simply add the event to your library.
- Remember you can also search by genres or hobbies and find a lot of content that is interesting to you and add it to your DVR Library for future viewing.

- You can customize your Live tab viewing preferences by selecting your profile photo >
